What are the rules of the game?

The rules are very simple: you don't mow in May. You don't have to let the whole lawn grow, but you can also spare only a part of it.

How do I help the pollinators with this?

The longer the mower rests in spring, the higher the chances of survival for the animals that overwinter on the ground or on the blades of grass. In addition, wild plants colonise lawns that are mown late. A grass-only lawn offers little habitat for insects and is not adapted to climate change.
